

6.1.3 - URBANIZATION

Analyze the changing urban and rural landscape by examining the location and expansion of major urban centers, the growth of cities linked by industry and trade, the development of cities divided by race, ethnicity, and class, resulting tensions among and within groups, and different perspectives about immigrant experiences in the urban setting.

There were many changes between the urban and rural areas. One of the changes in the rural areas was that people were moving out of them because they couldn't get to their jobs. The urban areas were growing in size because people were moving into the city for their jobs. Some of the reasons why the rural areas were shrinking due to rich people building mansions. So there were many reasons why there were changes in rural and urban areas.

Rural areas were shrinking due to the expanding urban areas. When people were building houses in the rural areas because some of the people were rich enough to build houses or even mansions. But at the same time the rural areas were expanding but at a slower rate because more and more people weren't able to get jobs, so they moved out of the cities into the country for farming.

There were also cities that were divided by race. These kind of cities had half divided into one nationality, and the other half would be from another nation. At times in these cities there would be tensions between the 2 races causing riots.
